

Part 7 Gobstoppers

Daisy and Kian were in the Fields' living room. Daisy was on the sofa under a cozy-looking duvet with a bright pattern of daisies in a field of green. She looked miserable.

She was telling Kian all about her call with Heather.

"She won't just leave Jack all alone," said Kian, "I can understand that. But she still needs to come home." 5

"But," Daisy began, "I mean, what'll she do about the baby? She'll be a mum soon! I can't believe it!"

"And Jack will be a dad," said Kian, more to himself than to Daisy. What if Jack was like his father, and didn't want to be a parent? He kept this awful thought to himself. 10

Daisy looked at Kian with her big, sad eyes and slowly said, "You're right, Kian, I have to help. I'll tell Rita ..."

"Good idea, Dais. She'll know what to do!" said Kian. Then he gave her a little bag, "Here, have a gobstopper!" 15

At that moment the door opened and in walked ...

2 cozy-looking ['kəʊzɪləʊkɪŋ] gemütlich aussehend • 2 duvet ['dju:veɪ] Bettdecke •
3 pattern ['pætn] Muster • 3 miserable ['mɪzrəbl] elend • 11 parent ['peərənt]
Elternteil • 11 thought [θɔ:t] Gedanke